MAJOR PEARSON WANTS AID

ROOMS NEEDED DURING GUARD
ENCAMPMENT IN AUGUST.

Citizens Must Help Care for Visitors.
Many Rooms Needed.

The following letter from Leroy Pearson, quartermaster general of Michigan, indicates that there will be a scarcity of accommodations for wives and other relatives of the guard officers, during the time of the National Guard encampment to be held at the Military reservation beginning August 4.

Board of Trade, Grayling, Michigan.

We are commencing to receive many inquiries regarding accommodations for officers' wives and families during the encampment.

It looks as though we would have many more than can be accommodated at the camp and we desire to locate accommodations at the private cottages and down-town residences, if possible.

I wondered if your local Board of Trade would undertake to compile a list of people in Grayling and at the lake who desire to rent a room or two, whether or not they desire to furnish meals and any other information that would be of interest to an applicant.

If you could have this information compiled and sent to me, we will publish it to the officers throughout the State and that will enable them to communicate directly with the parties who have accommodations.

LeRoy Pearson,
Quartermaster General.

With those homes that can provide rooms during this time please notify President of Board of Trade or any of the other officers.

COUNTY OFFICERS BANQUET.

The monthly banquet and get-together meeting of the county officers and supervisors was held at Hotel Cody Tuesday night and was well attended. Mine Host Cody and his good wife know well how to make things taste good to a crowd of banqueters and this time was no exception. Delicious chicken and biscuits with all the perquisites that go with a chicken dinner were served the guests.

County Treasurer Edwin Chalker was master of ceremonies. It is the custom of the members to discuss at these meetings problems that come up in every-day work, but because of the fact that one of the members, Hans Christensen, was about to resign and move to Flint, it was turned into a farewell meeting.

Several appropriate and interesting talks were given. Those who took part in the addresses were the following:

Marion Hanson, Lieutenant Emeritus Bates, Editor O. P. Schumann, Prosecuting Attorney, Merle Nellist, Superintendent of the Poor, L. A. Gardner, Judge Geo. Sorenson, Postmaster Holger F. Petersen, Supervisor Wm. Feldhausen, Chairman of Road Commissioners, Ralph Hanna, Supervisor Oliver B. Scott, Township Treasurer Edna Matson, James Bowens and Supervisor Hans Christensen.

Well deserved tribute was paid to Mr. Christensen, as an official and as a worthy citizen. He will offer his resignation at once and with his wife will leave soon for Flint to make their future home.

Before the meeting closed a round of discussion pertaining to taxation and other pertinent subjects were had, and many new angles upon the subjects were opened. Chairman Chalker promises to devote a whole evening on the discussion of this subject soon.

POLICE RECORD FOR JUNE.

Local police officers report the following arrests and convictions during June up to Wednesday of this week: Carl Nelson, Emil Giegle and Vernon DeRow, all for fast driving; George Miller, Jr. for driving without lights.

The arrests of the foregoing were made by Sheriff Jorgenson.

Night Marshal Al Cripps is credited for the arrest of Edgar Dyer for being drunk.

He says that Dyer made some resistance and might have been charged with resisting an officer, but when he saw that Dyer was going to put up a fight he asked him whether he wanted it smooth or rough and Dyer answered "rough."

When the latter was landed in jail he had the skin nearly all peeled off his right cheek bone. Cripps is getting a reputation of being an officer who cannot be trifled with.

—(Later)—Just as we are going to press this morning we learn that Conrad Howe of Maple Forest was arrested last night by Cripps for being "Soused." Justice Freeland fined him $10.00 and $3.95 costs.

Earl Barber of Frederic is again in the clutches of the law. This time it is reported that he stole a Ford coupe in Frederic and was on his way south on the gravel road leading to Grayling when he accidentally went into a ditch and wrecked the car.

He was arrested last fall for carrying a loaded revolver but was let off on probation for one year by Judge Smith.

Albert Lewis of Frederic was his bondsman and when the car episode occurred he requested that the young man be apprehended and cancelled his bonds.

No formal complaint has been issued by the owner of the car, and it is believed that some settlement has been made by Barber. Earl just simply won't keep out of trouble. He seems to have had a lot of it during the past couple of years.

Great Fireworks Exhibition Ready For State Fair

"India," a stupendous feature characterized by costly exhibitions of fireworks both day and night will be one of the big entertainment features of the $5,000,000 Michigan State Fair which will be held this year at Detroit from August 31 to September 9.

The daylight fireworks will be a special attraction for the benefit of the children who are at the fair in large numbers before nightfall.

Real elephants, ridden through the streets of the fair grounds by native Hindus, are part of this attraction.

The fireworks exhibition will be held each night for nine nights. Each show will last 45 minutes.

HALF A MILLION TO SEE BIG FAIR

$1,000,000 BEING SPENT TO CARE FOR GROWING
ATTENDANCE

"Half a Million."

That is the slogan of the 1923 Michigan State Fair which will be held in Detroit August 31 to September 9.

"Our annual attendance has just about reached the 400,000 figure already," said Secretary-Manager George W. Dickinson.

"But with an additional $1,000,000 being spent this year for extensive improvements we expect fully half a million persons to visit the fair during the ten days."

"This is the nation's greatest exposition. It is a $5,000,000 show given by the state of Michigan for the education and entertainment of the people."

"Our agricultural and live stock exhibits this year will surpass by far anything of the kind ever seen, everything seems to indicate. And our races and other sports, our great spectacular stunts and our lively midway where the carnival spirit reigns will be without parallel."

"Every man should try to spend at least a few days at this great exposition, bringing his family along to enjoy an educational vacation in the finest weather of the year."

It is planned to have a great reception for the governors. First, they probably will be driven in automobiles through the downtown streets, the automobiles bearing banners of the state from which the governors come.

Then a great public reception will be held for the governors in the big new Coliseum in the state fair grounds, where about 18,000 persons will have an opportunity to see and hear the governors.

An automobile trip through Detroit,

an inspection of the fair, luncheons and other affairs are being tentatively arranged.

During the governors' visit the downtown streets of Detroit will be profusely decorated with banners to give the whole city a gala appearance.

Bands will parade the streets in buses and the metropolis will take on the atmosphere of a great holiday.

A plan that will be of great interest to farmers is the contemplated erection in the state fair grounds of a $200,000 pavilion for the exhibition of sheep and swine. The Michigan State Fair is progressing so rapidly that in a year from now still larger quarters for the exhibitors will be imperative.

It is the policy of the management to try to accommodate every possible exhibit, not only for the satisfaction of the individual farmer, but for the benefit of all other farmers who find valuable lessons in the observance of the neighbors' products.</

Jefferson and Monticello

© Harris & Ewing

Jefferson is the first American who has consulted the arts to know how he should shelter himself from the weather.—Marquis de Chastellux.

THOMAS JEFFERSON Memorial Foundation is raising a million dollars by popular subscription to acquire Monticello and maintain it as a national memorial to the man whose hand put the Declaration of Independence on paper. The difficulties that have heretofore prevented the acquisition of Jefferson's Virginia home as a permanent memorial have been overcome. Jefferson M. Levy, present owner of Monticello, whose family has held title to the property since his uncle, Commodore Uriah P. Levy of the United States navy, bought it in 1833, seven years after Jefferson's death, has always been an ardent admirer of the author of the Declaration of Independence and was loath to part with Monticello. Patriotic motives, finally influenced him to enter into an agreement with the Memorial Foundation.

Monticello was Jefferson's home from 1770 till his death, July 4, 1820, and therefore famous. But with its passage out of the possession of the Jefferson family a little more than a century ago, it was all but forgotten by the public; not completely, however, because in 1865 the legality of the will of Commodore Uriah Phillips Levy, leaving the estate to the federal or to the state government for use as an agricultural college, or to Hebrew charity organizations, was contested in the courts by his family. In 1912 a bill was introduced in congress by Representative Martin W. Littleton providing for the purchase of Monticello by the nation. Although the time was propitious because the Democratic party had just returned to power, the bill was not passed, nor was it in 1917 when it was revived.

Jefferson, as every good American knows or should know, was third President of the United States 1801-09. He was born in Virginia April 13, 1743.

He was graduated from William and Mary college in 1762 and admitted to the bar in 1767. He was member of the Continental Congress, 1775-1776; member of the committee—Jefferson, Adams, Sherman, Franklin and Livingston—to draft the Declaration of Independence; one of the signers; a leading member of the Virginia legislature, 1776; governor of Virginia, 1779; member of congress, 1783; minister to France, 1784-1789; secretary of state, 1790-1794; and Washington vice-president, 1797-1801; in the administration of John Adams; founder of the University of Virginia; married, 1772, Martha W. Skelton; died July 4, 1820, at Monticello; left one son and five daughters.

While President, Jefferson pursued a vigorous policy of economy; hence the phrase "Jeffersonian simplicity." He made many political removals from office, the beginning of the "spoils system" of Jackson's time. The principal events of his administration were these: the war against Tripoli, because of piracy against American vessels; the Louisiana purchase from France; the passage of the twelfth amendment to the Constitution; the duel between Hamilton and Burr; and Burr's trial for treason; the Lewis and Clark expedition; Pike's expedition to the Rocky mountains; England's assertion of the right to search American vessels for British deserters; the embargo act; Fulton's Clermont in regular service between New York and Albany; an act prohibiting the slave trade.

Eagle Nests Endure

Describing the bald eagles which make their nests on the desolate islands of South Carolina, Herbert Brevet Sasse writes in Harper's: "There is something characteristic of the great bird itself, and something attractive to the mind, in the performance of the eagle's home." Most birds' nests are ephemeral things. After a few weeks or months they are gone, and not only gone but forgotten. The

DECLARING THE DECLARATION

Monticello is peculiarly fitted to be a Jefferson shrine because he himself planned and built the mansion. Its location is about three miles from Charlottesville, the seat of the University of Virginia, which Jefferson founded. On every side from the spot which Jefferson selected as the site of his home stretch great reaches of some of the most beautiful country in the United States.

The site of Jefferson's birthplace, Shadwell, is only a short distance away. He himself selected the site for his mountain home, drew the designs and plans for the house, selected the stone and timber used in the structure, looked after the construction of the brick and the nails made by his own servants, devised advanced and ingenious contrivances for comfort and convenience, designed the decoration of the interior and personally selected the furnishings and ornaments, and not only planned but gave personal supervision to the laying out of the various buildings on the estate, the gardens, the walks and the roadways. Work was begun on the house in 1770.

When Shadwell was destroyed by fire in 1770, Monticello was far enough completed for the family to move in. Two years later he brought his bride, Martha Wayles Skelton, there, although a greater part of the house was still unfinished. Indeed, throughout his life, Monticello continued in minor ways, as his biographer Raynor puts it, "to be in a state of almost constant edification and re-edification. In 1803, there were still rooms to be plastered; in 1808 the main house itself might be said to be completed; but long after that he experimented with garden temples and other smaller buildings.

Though architecture was only a hobby with Jefferson, today he is acclaimed a great architect. Anyway, Monticello is not the only example of his work; he is responsible for the structure of several other plantation houses in the neighborhood and took great delight during his last years in planning the buildings of the University of Virginia and overseeing their construction.

The exterior of Monticello—"little Monticello"—is in the Doric order of architecture. The interior is in the Ionic style. A portico, the full height of the house, with stone pillars and steps projects 25 feet. It is a brick mansion 100 by 100 feet, with white pillars, cornices and balustrades, surmounted by a dome, standing in the midst of a lawn overlooking river, woodlands and fertile valley, with a view of mountains to the west and of the east. The appearance is of one story and entering the hall one is still deceived, for Jefferson disliked staircases to such an extent that he shut them all up in closets. The hall shows only a gallery on which the bedrooms open. In the dome itself Jefferson planned a billiard room, but a law was passed by the state before it was completed, forbidding the game and so it was left in an unfinished state. The wings of the house end in octagonal projections; the northern one containing the dining room, tea room and two guest rooms, the southern forming Jefferson's private suite, sitting room, library, and bedroom. Under the dome on the west is the great drawing room, famous for its parqueté flooring of native woods and its pillared portico. There were 552 acres in the estate.

More notable of the architectural features of the house is the hiding away of all signs of kitchen, laundry, stable and the many workshops necessary on a plantation of that period when almost every article in daily use was manufactured on the estate by servants and slaves. The sharp declivity of the mountain made it possible to have these offices all at a lower level than the house. A tunnel from the basement leads right and left to one-story pavilions, used by the slaves. By this contrivance dishwashers, cooks, butlers, maids, troops of slaves with wood for fires, cans of ashes, pails of hot or cold water did their work without disturbing the tranquility of the family and their guests. An oddity contrived by Jefferson is a dumb-waiter for hoisting wine from the cellar, with a capacity of but one bottle.

Monticello, undoubtedly the finest mansion in that section of Virginia, cost its owner, according to his account books, about $7,200. The ornamental stone was brought from Philadelphia to Richmond in water and hauled from Richmond in carts.

When Jefferson in 1809 completed his second term as President, he hastened to Monticello; there he hoped to find privacy, freedom and leisure. In a measure, perhaps, he realized this. He enjoyed society, but he did not relish the intrusion of idle, curious fellow countrymen who came to stare and gape.

Capt. Edmund Baker, for 20 years Jefferson's overseer and man of business, said that Jefferson's visitors "ate him out of house and home." Anyway, on Jefferson's death the estate was so impoverished that his heirs were compelled to part with Monticello.

Monticello is like an ancestral mansion. It stands year after year, enduring for a longer time than many a man lives, cured for and kept in repair by the winged architects—who build it and who seem to have a genuine affection for it. On a plantation near the coast there is a nest in a pine 112 feet above the ground. For more than 50 years the same pair of eagles have inhabited this nest, and it is possible that they will still be living there when houses that men are building today, out of the kind of lumber with which one must now be content, have fallen into ruin."

Clay Tramping.

In the manufacture of glass, the clay for the pots in which the ingredients are melted must be kneaded by human feet. No mechanical means has been found entirely satisfactory in producing the proper consistency. As might be imagined, this is tiresome work for the trampler, and he often suffers greatly from sore feet as a result of this kind of work.

Discussion Settles Error

The great enemy of knowledge is not error, but inaccuracy. All that we want to discuss, and then we are sure to do well, no matter what our blunders may be. One error conflicts with another, each destroys its opponent, and truth is evolved.—Buckle.

The Finest Line in English Poetry.

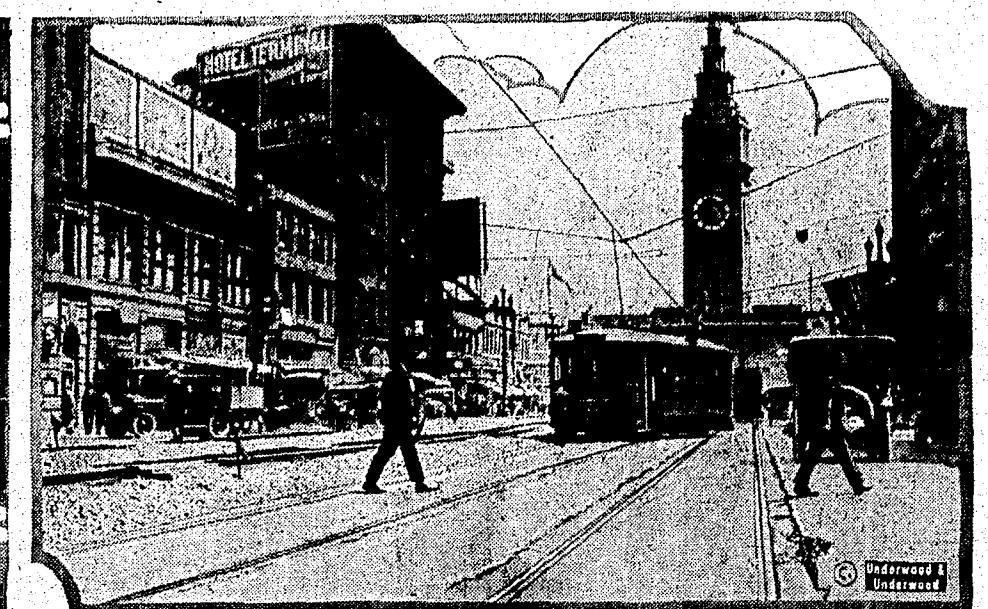

An English critic thinks that the finest line in English poetry is from Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey": "Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns." Tennyson once said that this was "almost the grandest in the English language, giving the sense of the abiding in the transient."

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERRORS

For Women Who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I feel younger than I did two years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, 85 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine.

Many times they state in their letters their willingness to answer women who write them. It is an offer dictated by gratitude and a desire to help others.

School Follows Flag.

The little red school house is following the flag in Alaska, and Eskimos and natives of the great North country in increasing numbers are being Americanized.

The interior department has just announced that the public schools in Alaska have been increased from 67 to 75, and the number of teachers from 133 to 144.

All the schools are the "centers" of small villages. The teachers act not only as instructors, but as guides and mentors to the villagers, nurses, financial advisers and community builders generally. These schools are maintained separately from those conducted for white children in Alaska.

Mr. Ahman, who was employed as chief mechanic for Salling Hanson Lumber Co., for many years resigned and accepted a position in Saginaw, but was induced to return to Grayling and continue in the employ of the company. The family however remained in Saginaw until school was closed, and their son Henry this year graduated from a trade school in that city. LIQUOR SHIPS SEIZURE LOOMS

MEDICINAL CLAIMS ONLY HAVE BLOCKED OUTRIGHT
CONFISCATION.

MINISTER BALDWIN UPHOLDS U.S.

British Law Does Not Tolerate Even Temporary Presence of Unlawful Liquor.

Washington — If foreign ships should persist in bringing liquor for beverage purposes on the high seas within American territorial waters they will raise the question of confiscation of the vessels as well as the liquor, administration officials intimated Monday.

So far, says the prohibition unit, the treasury department "has not insisted upon the seizure of the foreign ships that have brought liquors into American territorial waters for two principal reasons." These reasons are:

"1. The question involved concerning the liquors is whether they may, as claimed by the foreign vessels, be used for medicinal purposes, and they are brought into our waters with an avowed purpose to test that question legally, and for this purpose the presence of the subject matter of dispute only, to wit, the liquors, is required.

"2. For the reasons of delicacy involved, it being the purpose of the department to proceed in as unobtrusive manner as is consistent with a proper enforcement of the law and thus avoid complications that might possibly be of a serious nature."

As a result of the test the foreign ship lines will learn how much liquor they may bring across the three-mile limit for medicinal purposes. Then if they bring in liquor in excess of the amount for medicinal purposes their ships will be liable to confiscation in addition to the contraband liquor.

Although the public outcry in England against American interference with ship liquor supplies is loud and indignant, any protest or retaliation by the British government would occasion great surprise here, particularly in view of Prime Minister Baldwin's statement in the house of commons that British official seals confer no immunity upon any article brought by a British ship within American territorial waters and the disclosure that the British government itself does not tolerate even the temporary presence of liquor of an unlawful status within British territorial waters.

Administration officials called attention to this case, which was decided on June 8, to demonstrate that the United States deals with liquor unlawfully brought within territorial waters no more severely than does the British government.

MANY ARE INJURED IN WRECKS

Seven Dead in "L" Plunge—Interurban Jumps Track.

New York—Seven persons were killed and 83 were injured Monday when a two-car train plunged from the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit elevated structure at Fifth and Flatbush avenues in Brooklyn and were smashed to matchwood.

Edwin Parcells, motorman, was arrested on a charge of homicide.

Firemen tossed aside their helmets and rubber garments and plunged into the wreckage, tearing at the timbers with their hands, when axes and crowbars could not be used without endangering the injured.

As the cars crashed to the street, they carried with them a mass of high-tension electric wires and these, spitting sheets of blue flame, ignited the shattered wreckage of the antique wooden cars.

Kalamazoo—Walter Green, of Kalamazoo, motorman of the interurban car which Monday jumped the Michigan United Railway tracks on a curve at Parma and crashed into the fire and police building 200 feet away is battling bravely for his life in the Jackson city hospital. He suffered a fractured skull, and local physicians fear he has little chance for recovery.

The car, carrying 30 passengers, was running from Kalamazoo to Detroit, via Jackson, and was behind schedule, it is said. Plunging across the street, and swaying from side to side, it injured the lives of several firemen who were sitting about the doorway of their station. They leaped to safety a moment before the car hit the building, wrecking the front and scattering the brick and stone in all directions.

Postman Walks Many Miles.
Baltimore—To the moon! That, after a way of figuring, is the record of David C. Walsh, Baltimore postman, champion long distance walker of the local postoffice. But the veteran letter carrier, who for 35 years has collected mail from boxes along the city streets, never may return. On May 25, his sixty-fifth birthday, he faced retirement. Now he is 29,750 miles on his return trip. Walsh is credited with walking 267,750 miles during his service at the Baltimore postoffice.

AGRICULTURAL YEAR BOOK AND BULLETINS FREE.

Congressman Roy O. Woodruff of this district, has just been allotted his quota of Agricultural Year Books for 1922, and wishing to place these interesting and valuable publications of the Department of Agriculture at the disposal of as many constituents throughout the District as possible, advises that he will forward copies without charge to all who will write him at Room 185 House Office Building, Washington, D. C. until the supply which has been made available to him is exhausted.

This edition of the Year book contains the Annual Report of the Secretary of Agriculture, giving a general outline of the work of the Department during the past year, the progress that has been made in dealing with difficulties which the Department is assisting the farmer to overcome, a statement of conditions in the various lines of agricultural activity and information relative to appropriations and expenditures of the Department. Included in this report is also a list of Farmers' Bulletins, Department Circulars published during the last fiscal year.

In chapters dealing with the history, the present situation and the future outlook, the reader will find presented in somewhat detailed manner the economic situation regarding five of our leading agricultural products, namely: hogs, dairy, tobacco, small grains other than wheat, and forestry. The statistical part of the year book comprises more than 500 pages and submits figures on the production, market prices, and freight rates of the leading agricultural commodities throughout the country.

Profusely illustrated, accurate in its facts and figures, and attractively bound, this volume is worthy a place in the finest library. It is not only a faithful review of conditions in the field of agriculture to date, but it attempts to foretell as well as can be done what may be expected in the future, in the light of past experience.

Congressman Woodruff takes this opportunity to acquaint his constituents with the fact that Government publications of this sort may be procured through him without cost and will esteem it a privilege to comply with all requests as promptly as possible.

Practically every problem that confronts the farmer is covered in these bulletins; besides scores that are of interest and value to house-holders generally among the latter we have selected a few, and suggest that anyone interested should write Congressman Woodruff to send them. They are as follows:

- 142. Nutritive Value of Food.
- 256. Preparation of Vegetables for the Table.
- 375. Care of Food in the Home.
- 391. Economical Use of Meat in the Home.
- 511. Farm Bookkeeping.
- 609. Bird Houses and How to Build Them.
- 717. Food for Young Children.
- 771. Homemade Fireless Cookers and Their Use.

Chris Hoesli,
Highway Commissioner,
6-28-2 Grayling Twp.

Catania, Sicily—Hurling thousands of tons of flaming lava high into the sky from its main crater, while five new craters are belching molten destruction with reports like those of a thousand cannon, Mount Etna is in eruption and already has destroyed five villages and threatens a score of others.

A great wall of molten lava, 80 to 40 feet in height, sits over the spot where the little town of Linguaglossa had stood, and advanced in a flaming line, 300 yards across, upon neighboring hamlets. The village of Boscoragno disappeared. Three entire townships, Ferro, Picciolo and Pallamella, have disappeared.

Thirty thousand persons have been made homeless in the stricken area, it was officially estimated.

Inhabitants of the threatened towns warned for days by rumblings and mutterings of the great mountain volcano, fled to safety in time; no casualties have been reported, but roads are clogged with rude carts and peasants and their families staggering along beneath loads of household belongings, snatched from in front of the fiery masses that inundated their homes.

At each new demonstration of the awakening giantess, new flights are begun by the terrified Sicilians.

The lava pours down the mountain sides and over the surrounding country at considerable speed.

A line of railroad has gone under; the station at Castiglione burst into flames and then was buried in lava.

As in the days of old Pompeii the terror of the volcano has communicated itself to the countryside for miles around. Cattle and sheep are being driven in great herds from the direction of Etna.

The populace fills the street of nearby towns, even of those at a safe distance. No work is being done.

The eruption began at an early hour last Sunday morning with a terrific explosion as though the end of the world had come. The whole top of Etna appeared to have blown off.

Rome—Mount Vesuvius, on the edge of the bay of Naples, is increasing in activity, according to a report here. The volume of smoke has been increasing steadily, the report stated. Residents in the vicinity are alarmed. Mount Etna's activities are believed responsible for the new signs of life from Vesuvius.

AUTOMOBILE RACER IS KILLED

Three Drivers and Two Spectators Injured at Fair Grounds.

Grand Rapids—One driver of a racing car was killed and three pilots and two spectators were injured in the 100-mile automobile race at the West Michigan State Fair grounds at Comstock Park, last Sunday.

Bernard J. "Buddy" McCale, 24 years old, of Detroit, who had participated in 26 races in Michigan, was hurled to his death in a collision of machines. Byron Dalley, 30, Jackson; Glenn Howard, Indianapolis, and Aura Smith, 23, Bay City, all pilots, were hurt, and Roy Rich, 23, and Guy R. Cole, 17, spectators, were seriously injured.

While speeding down the track directly opposite the grand stand on the thirty-ninth lap, Dalley's car blew a tire. He wheeled to the inside of the track and was wiped his goggles when McCale's car wiped down through the cloud of dust and locked wheels with Dalley's speedster.

USE PLANES TO SURVEY ALASKA

Data Will Be Obtained That Would Take Weeks of Labor.

Washington—An extensive survey of Alaskan territory from the air, with a view to ascertaining data on airports, air bases, and general coast line information of value to aviation projects, will be made this summer by two Navy DT sea-planes.

It is expected that information of value to conservation and development projects will be obtained in this manner from the air in territory and over terrain that is otherwise almost inaccessible.

In addition to the survey that will be made in connection with airport and landing field facilities, photographic maps will be made and information will be gathered which will be of great value to the coast and geodetic survey and the Alaskan coal commission.

It is also planned to make a survey of the Alaskan oil fields and of the seal herds on the Alaskan coast and in the surrounding waters.

WHAT LEGION POSTS CAN DO

Essay Contests, Participated in by Children, Bring Out Many Good Suggestions.

Carrying out a national program of activities in community affairs American Legion posts in many localities are holding essay contests among school children. The post at Monson, Maine, recently held a contest among children of the seventh and eighth grades on the subject, "What the American Legion Can Do to Better Our Town." The winning essay, written by Miss Anna Zimmerman, contains suggestions which Legion national officials believe worthy of adoption by other posts.

The essay, in part, follows:

"The erection of a soldiers' monument would keep alive in the minds of the small boys' admiration of bravery and patriotism. This would also make the town look better and would show other towns that we had contributed our share towards defeating the Kaiser."

"Clean streets is another item of great importance. The children could be encouraged by the Legion to keep the streets and sidewalks free from all kinds of waste matter."

"Another thing of importance is a public playground where children of all ages could go and play any time that they wish to. This playground would require a supervisor to keep the grounds in good condition and to introduce proper play. This would keep the children off the streets and therefore there would be less chance for accidents."

"A band stand would be a very nice thing for the town to have. We have a very nice band, but there is no good place to play outdoors, while if they had a band stand, they could give concerts at least one night in every week."

"A gymnasium would be of great value to the young people of this town. There is no place where sports can be enjoyed here. There could also be a public swimming place where children could learn to swim."

"Among some of the important things is to have a good hall, which would add to the town a great deal, as there is no hall to have entertainments and socials given by the town unless they use the halls owned by private parties."

"The Legion men could open up the quarrels that are now out of work, which would draw young men as well as men with families to come here and live."

"They could also help stimulate Americanism among the people of Monson by example and by patriotic entertainments."

LEGION EXTENDS GLAD HAND

Placing in Federal Position Member of Canadian Body One Example of Comradery.

The hand of the American Legion is always extended in fellowship to veterans of the allied armies. In many cases this is done in daily association and in comradeship, and in others, in actual aid and financial assistance for the former comrades-at-arms.

T. T. Watson, a member of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, is a firm believer in the friendliness of the Legion, according to a recent letter to T. C. Lapp, editor of the Veteran, the official publication of the Canadian organization. This letter found its way to National Adj. Lemuel Boles of the American Legion and is an illustration of the splendid feeling existing between the organizations in the United States and Canada. Watson wrote:

"I starved out in the Okanagan valley and came to the U. S. flat broke."

"Went into the American Legion and asked what was the chance for a member of the G. W. V. A. to get a job. They said the chance was fine and until they found me a job there was bed and board and an advance in money. Inside of 24 hours they placed me in a good U. S. federal job, where I still am and likely to remain."

"I write this to show that the American Legion has the friendliest feeling for all Canadian returned men. The motto is 'Every returned man a job and they seem to be carrying it into effect.'

Watson made his application to the Tacoma (Wash.) post of the Legion which placed him at work in a local hospital.

On Equal Terms.

A rookie who had been assigned to the cavalry much against his will approached the sergeant and remonstrated.

"Say," he objected, "I never rode a horse in my life."

"Oh, that's all right," countered the sergeant, easily. "We've got a horse that's never been ridden in his life. We'll start you off together."—American Legion Weekly.

Juvenile Scalper.

Teacher: "I thought I told you to sit in the seat next to Mary Jones."

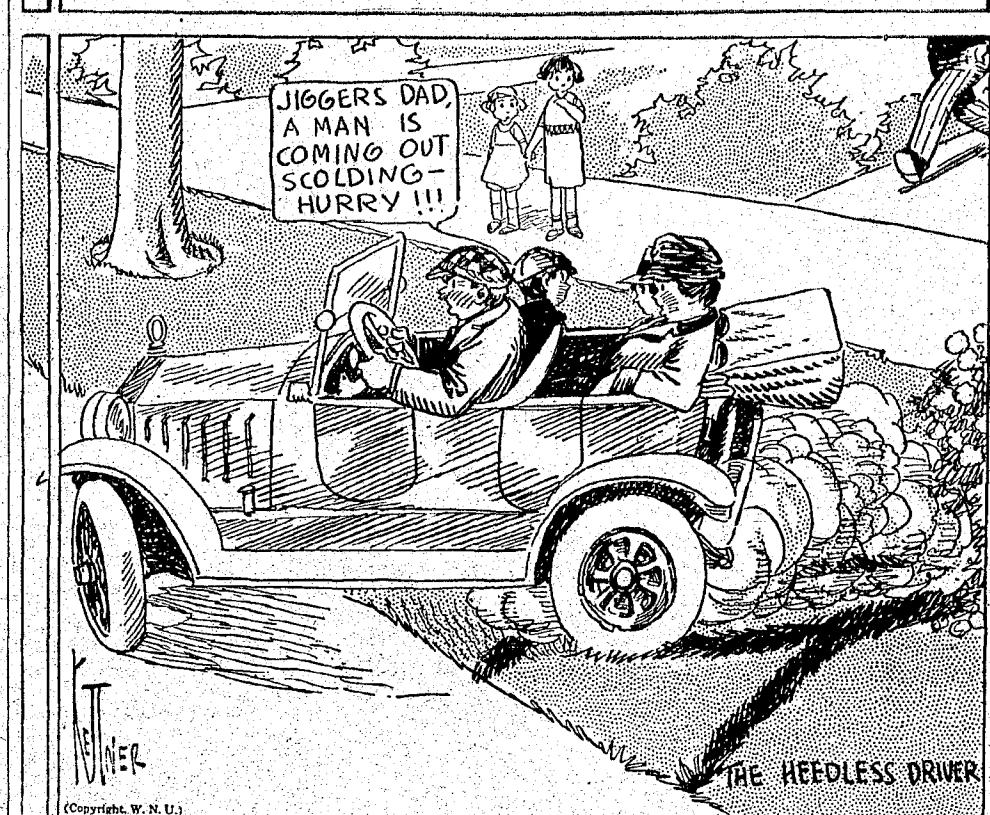

Willie Wisecare: "Yes, ma'am, ye did, but I sold it to Tommy Smith for a nickel."—American Legion Weekly.

For Better Citizenship.

All public school children of Ohio must receive a physical examination and take not less than 100 minutes per week of physical training, according to a bill recently enacted into legislation by the Ohio legislature. The bill was sponsored by the American Legion of that state which has adopted a platform of better education in the public schools. The law will make possible the detection and remedying of many physical defects in the school children and the development of normal physiques and mental alertness.

Kipling's Recessional

Kipling's poem, "The Recessional," now to be found in several church hymnals, that of the Church of England in Canada, for instance, became at once popular and is today famous, because it is true poetry; because its theme is important, its sentiments lofty, its construction original, strong and in parts even sublime, and its metre sonorous and impressive. It teaches a great truth—the dependence of the success of human efforts and the stability of human institutions upon divine laws; and the poet exhorts the British people not to lose sight of this great truth. It really is a prayer, for does not the poet several times repeat: "Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet."

"Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Show Hats of Varied Types;

Lace Adorns Alluring Gowns

A LOT of things happen along to take the joy out of life, but a lot of other things have happened this season to add joy to it. Among these happenings are the new hats shown for summer wear. They are joyous and lovely affairs calculated to make one forget a bitter moment or a bad quarter hour.

Every woman loves, and with good reason, a wide-brimmed, graceful model, like the fine millan shown at the top of the group. It has a demiface of black velvet about the under brim and a delightful little ruff, of fine val lace, at the brim decorated with silk embroidery in three high colors.

As long as women have patrician instincts they will love good lace and do them honor by choosing them for their most alluring dresses. And if one's needs call for only one formal gown, it is the part of wisdom to choose lace for it, or lace in combination with another fabric of equal class. One of those satisfying gowns in which lace and crepe de chine set one another off, is presented here.

Wide lace flouncing makes a part of the fabric display everywhere, and it is shown in many colors. In the gown decorated with silk embroidery in three high colors.

The wonderful powers of Tanlac are again very forcefully demonstrated. This time in the case of Dan Keegan, prominent contractor, 873 Ayers St., Youngstown, Ohio. He says:

"I was down so far my friends scarcely recognized me and I hardly expected to live, but in just two months' time after I started on Tanlac I picked up twenty-one pounds and felt as well as I had in ten years. For a long time I had to live on milk and eggs, was little more than a walking skeleton and had a persistent cough that was pulling me to pieces.

"Well, Tanlac would be cheap at five dollars a bottle. I can eat any old thing now without trouble afterwards, and if I'm short a hand I can pitch in and do a day's work with any of my men and never feel the worse for it. I can recommend Tanlac to the limit."

"Why so?"

"Well, you won't get so much help. As things stand, the author, the press agent and the property man are in love with you."—Los Angeles Times.

John W. Oliver, director of the historical commission, went back to his rural home town once after a prolonged absence, during which he had been wrestling with the problem of getting an education and laying the foundation for his chosen future work. One of his old-time farmer friends, interested and inquisitive with a view to learning what the boy had been doing for himself, said:

"Well, John, what you been up to since I saw you last?"

"I've been going to school. I'm teaching now."

"Where you been going to school?"

"Wisconsin university."

"Uh-hu! Party big school, reckon. How many scholars they got?"

"Oh, several thousand."

(Incredulous whistle from the interrogator.) "Must have several teachers?"

"Yes—about 400."

(Whistle.) "And you're one of 'em, you say? What dye teach?"

"I teach history."

"Oh, no! There are about eight history teachers."

"Eight! Landakes, I didn't know there was so much history!"—Indianapolis News.

The relief that Sandy felt, and dismissed as selfish, was marred by the cordial understanding that had sprung up between the two. He wondered if they had discovered a real attachment for each other.

"I'll have to go first thing tomorrow," said Westlake. "I'm sorry, too. They've come up to my counter-offer, Bourke, and they want me to come on immediately. It means a lot to me. Everything," he added, with a smile that Molly returned.

"You'll write," she said. "You promised."

Miranda broke in. "I'm glad sure. You've got some good news," she said. "There's been trouble out to Jim Plimsool. He shot at Wyatt or Wyatt at him. I don't know which right." But there was sides taken an' a general rumpus. Several of his men quit or was run off the place. Plimsool's aimin' to sell out. Ed heard. It'll be a good ride."

"I'll have a telegram for you to take back," Miranda said. "You sendin' me, one, Westlake?"

"If you'll take it, Miss Bailey."

"Glad to."

Westlake and Molly were both standing. They moved toward the door and out to the moonlit veranda together.

"They seem to hit it off well, that pair," said Miranda.

Kate Nicholson murmured something about the kitchen and left the room to attend to some refreshments.

"Now tell me about Keith," demanded Miranda. "What's he been up to?"

Sandy told her.

"I ain't a mite surprised. That Westlake acts white. I liked him from the start. What are you goin' to do about Molly? You ain't told her yet?"

"No use spinnin' her but you hef to have it," said Sandy. "I'm goin' to talk with Keith first."

Kate Nicholson returned and the talk changed. Westlake and Molly remained outside until the food was served. Then there was music. Miranda departed at last with the telegrams. Molly lingered as good-nights were said.

"I've got something to tell you, Sandy," she said. "It's private, for the present," she added with a glance toward Westlake.

Sandy sat down by the fire with a sinking qualm. Molly perched herself on the arm of his chair, silent for a moment or two.

"It's a love story, Sandy," she said presently.

"Westlake?"

"Yes. He wanted me to tell you he went. He's very fond of you, Sandy."

"Is he?" Sandy spoke slowly, rousing himself with an effort. "I think he's a fine chap. I sure wish him all the luck in the world." He fanned his voice sounded flat.

"I suppose you wondered why we were so chummy all the evening?"

"Yes. I wondered a lit'l about that." Sandy did not look at her, but gazed into the dying fire. He saw himself sitting there, lonely, woman-shy once more, through the long stretch of years, with a letter coming once in while from far-off places telling of happiness that he had hoped for and yet had known could not be for him; Sandy, Bourke, cow-puncher, two-gun man, rancher, growing old.

"I was the first girl he had seen for a long while, you see," Molly was saying.

"And he had to talk it over with someone. He told me about it first this morning and then the telegram came."

"Talkin' about what?"

"His sweetheart. Now he can marry her with this opportunity. She may sall with him. Isn't it fine? He showed me her picture."

"It's the best news I've heard to a long time," answered Sandy soberly.

"I'm sleepy," said Molly. "Good-night, Sandy, dear."

She put her lips to his tanned cheek and left him in a maze. The dying fire leaped up and the room lightened. It died down again, but Sandy sat there, smoking cigarette after cigarette.

CHAPTER XVIII

Dehorned.

Miranda Bailey had offered to come in for Westlake with her car, but the train went early and he had refused. Molly drove him in the buckboard, his gris stowed behind, and Sandy saw them go with the old light back in his eyes. He gave Westlake a grip of the hand that made him wince.

"You can rely upon my information being correct," were Westlake's last words, spoken aside before he climbed into the buckboard and Molly flitted the reins over the backs of the team shooting off at top speed.

She came back a little before noon, her eyes wide with excitement.

"Mr. Keith's in town," she said. "With Donald and his secretary, Mr. Blake. He asked me if Mr. Westlake had been here and he seemed annoyed when I told him I had just seen him off on the train. They all came from Casey Town in the big car. Mr. Blake has some business in Hereford. He and Mr. Blake will stay on their private car. He told me to tell you he would be out tomorrow to see you. Oh, here's a telegram for you."

"Thanks," Sandy tucked the en-about Keith that sure shows his play. He's been discarding it!"

The Keith chauffeur had wandered off to the corrals where Sandy was showing Bluke around. Miranda handed Sandy a long envelope.

"Hen Collins had an accident last night," she said. "Blew a tire on the bridge by 'our place an' smashed through the railin'. But 'stid a rib or two an' was knocked out. We took him in. Hen was grateful to Ed 'fo' takin' him in an' puttin' him to bed an' sendin' 'fo' the doctor. Don't open that envelop, that Keith wensel might be lookin'. I reckon you'll want to spring it on him sudden."

"Sure," said Sandy. "Spring what?"

"I'm flustered," admitted Miranda. "I usually talk straight. Now I'll start to the beginnin'." When Keith arrived on this trip he had quite a reception in his private car. Ed was there with the rest. He invited them up to cigars. Talked big about Casey Town an' gen'ly patted himself on the back. Said it was too bad all the stock of the Molly wasn't held locally, but of course the price promoter had to have somethin' fo' his money. He was real affable.

"This time, when he come back yesterday, he brings up the subject ag'in, I don't know how many he saw or just what he said, but this is what he told Hen. That Casey Town was boomin' big an' that his own holdin's was neatin' him a heap. That he liked Hen fine an' had picked him out as a representative citizen. With a lot mo' slush, the upshot of which was that he lets him have a hundred shares of the Molly mine at par. Hen was to say nothin' about it because, says Keith, if it got out he was sellin' stock, it would send down the price of the shares. Hen was sure tickled. He woudn't have said a word about it on'y Ed picks these shares up out of the bed of the crick an' gives them to Hen after he'd been fixed up."

"Ed went nosh' around Hereford this mornin'. He got eight men—their names is inside the envelope—Creel one of 'em—to admit they bought some shares. Mighty glad they was to have 'em. Ed didn't tell 'em anything different, but he come scootin' home at noon an' I borrowed Hen's certif, seen' he was asleep. An' here it is."

"Mirandy," said Sandy. "I'll let Mormon tell you what we all think of you. You're sure deaf me an' act."

"He returned to the office. Keith eyed the envelope.

"Blake coming?" he asked.

"Not yet. When do we get another from the Molly, Keith?"

Keith laughed. "Needin' some ready money?"

"How about the dividind?"

"Why, that depends upon the output," Keith's voice purr'd but his eyes had narrowed. "The output has been big. The Molly has been a bonanza, so far. I do not think it will always pay dividends according to the immediate production, however. It is better, as a rule, to develop the mine as a whole rather than work the first rich veins."

"That's what you're talkin' about the stopes?"

Keith's face grew dark. The veins twitched at his temples.

"Look here, Bourke," he blustered. "You've been listening to some fool talk from that cub, Westlake. I know my business. You've got some stock in the mine, twenty-five per cent. I've put money and brains into it and I've got forty-nine per cent. Molly."

"If you had fo'ty-nine per cent I wouldn't be worryin' so much."

"What the devil do you mean?"

"I took you for a bettel' gambler than to git mad," said Sandy. "I'll just ask you a question on behalf of myself an' partners' twenty-five per cent. Am' Molly's twenty-six, me bein' her guardian. Plump an' plain, is the Mollie pinched out? How about it?"

"It's a d-d falsehood."

"Then why are you sellin' your stock?"

The words came like bullets as Sandy whipped the certificate out of the envelope and slapped it smartly on the desk. Keith whitened, flushed again, recovered himself.

"If I was not friendly to you, Bourke, I should take that as a direct insult. I can understand that you believe in Westlake and take stock in him that be told you. But he is a discharged employee. He has every reason to be intolerant."

"He didn't strike me that way," said Sandy. "Me, I set a good deal on his opinion."

"I don't imagine you knew much about mining, Bourke." Keith looked at his watch. "I'll really have to be goin'."

"It's a good story, Sandy," she said.

"I'm sleepy," said Molly. "Good-night, Sandy, dear."

She put her lips to his tanned cheek and left him in a maze. The dying fire leaped up and the room lightened. It died down again, but Sandy sat there, smoking cigarette after cigarette.

"I'll help you. I haven't forgotten, how to unlatch." Her nimble fingers worked as fast as Sandy's with buckles, collaring traces and loosing reins.

"Goin' to take Donald Keith out to a real ride on a real hawser?" he asked her.

"Yes. Tomorrow. He's keen to go. You'll come. And Sam and Kate?"

"I've got a bunch I'm goin' to be goin' to the mornin'." Her eyes were bright with a twinkle.

"I forgot. I wish you could come."

The amplified lesson of Friendship, re-acting the Grecian scene where Pythias became hostage for Damon, who was under sentence of death, while the latter went to bid farewell to his wife and child. Damon might have escaped but he did not; he was true to his friend and returned much to the utter amazement of Dionysius, tyrannical ruler of Syracuse and setting forth a new epoch of fidelity and honor. It is a beautiful play and was rendered by the West Branch guests in a very dramatic and pleasing manner. A banquet at Shoppington Inn was given at 6:00 p. m. before the lodge ceremonies began. This was attended by about fifty. I. W. Hansen, in behalf of Grayling welcomed the visitors in a most cordial manner. This was just as cleverly rendered by Attorney Chapin of West Branch lodge.
